

BARBARA WEATHERS

With a voice as heartfelt as it is dynamic, Barbara Weathers has established herself as a singer known for her evocative style. From a career which began at the age of 13, Barbara has consistently wowed audiences around the world.

The Greensboro, NC native was singing in church by the age of seven and quickly began honing her craft in numerous local bands across the state. Shortly thereafter, her voice caught the ear of several major record labels. MCA Records, in particular, approached Atlantic Starr about producing a demo for Barbara. This would be her very first time in a recording studio. The demo songs were "Secret Lovers" and "Silver Shadow." While MCA declined her demo, management for Atlantic Starr suggested to the band that she join their group.

With Barbara at the helm, the group scored hit after #1 hit including "Secret Lovers", "If Your Heart Isn't In It" and the perennial classic, "Always". Though the group had a female vocalist before Barbara and after Barbara, no vocalist is as closely identified with Atlantic Starr as Barbara Weathers.

Because Atlantic Starr toured extensively throughout Europe, Asia and the U.S., Barbara built up an extremely loyal following and in 1989 she left the group to pursue a solo career with Warner Bros. Records. Her first project was the critically acclaimed self-titled album, "Barbara Weathers," produced by Maurice White of Earth, Wind and Fire.

Her second solo album, "Seeing For the Very First Time," was produced by Jeffrey Weber and released solely in Japan where it was a huge success, selling out within a week. The album included the hit song, "Love of My Life", produced by Maurice White and performed by Barbara in both English and Japanese.

For her latest release, "Satisfaction Guaranteed," Barbara once again teamed up with renowned producer Jeffrey Weber to deliver the most intimate and personal recording of her career thus far. This recording gives the listener insight to both her spiritual and playful sides.

Barbara currently divides her time between performing, recording and as serving as a professional vocal coach for clients nationwide.
